

Mr. President,

I would like to congratulate Your Excellency for the assumption of the second session of the forum and I would like to point out to you the following: - The Iraqi constitution stipulates that all Iraqis are equal in rights and duties without discrimination of any racial or ethnic and sectarian Iraqi government to operate in a full effort to provide education and health services for all members of the Iraqi people, regardless of race, beliefs and religion. Also pledged to ensure freedom of worship and the preservation of cultural diversity.

My country is multi-ethnic, religions and sects since ancient times, and handles Iraq means aborigines because of all the Iraqi natives, because all people in this country and all the components got privileges deserves to be a citizen native both Christian Assyrians, Chaldeans, Yazidis, Mandaeans, and the rest of the ingredients. The Iraqi government has worked to ensure that all components get their rights guaranteed through representation in parliament and local government councils in all provinces, as well as representation in the central government and all the institutions of the Iraqi state.

It is worth mentioning that the Assyrian Christians represent the central government in many ministries Mr. Kanna Younadm of the member of the Iraqi parliament and Mr. William Isaiah Aodisho the Deputy Permanent Representative of the Mission of Iraq to the United Nations.

Thank you, Mr. President
