Contents

Acknowledgements ......................................................... 5
Introduction ............................................................. 7
World Bank Policy and the WDR 2008 ............................... 9
African Development Policies over the Last 25 Years ................ 14
  Structural adjustment strategy and the weakening of African states 15
  Return to a poverty and growth perspective ......................... 17
  Liberalized market’s impact on African smallholder agricultural production 21
    Staple food crop performance and rural household food security 21
    Global commodity markets ....................................... 25
    Underlying factors ................................................ 27
    The case of cotton ................................................ 28
    Future prospects .................................................. 29
Land Rights, Markets and Capital .................................... 32
  Land issues and land tenure reform ................................ 32
  Land individualisation and markets ................................ 34
  Large versus small scale farmers – Growing landlessness ...... 35
    Foreign land investments ........................................ 36
  Africa’s uncapitalized smallholder production: Three decades of declining investment and agricultural extension 37
Institutional Supports for African Smallholder Agriculture ......... 40
  African nation-states ............................................... 40
    Their role in agrarian development ............................ 40
    Disputed character and functioning of African states ........ 41
    Resource mobilization capacity of the state .................. 42
  Rural households as transforming institutions interacting with market and state trajectories 44
African Rural Agency in Response to Global Market Pressures

- Non-agricultural rural income diversification ............................................. 51
- Urban migration and employment .................................................................. 52
- Relinquishing smallholder production autonomy:
  - Contract farming and agricultural wage labour ........................................... 53
- Labour uncertainties of smallholder household members .............................. 54

Reading Between the Lines of the WDR 2008:

African Smallholders’ Rural Future

- Abandoning food security and smallholder agricultural development aims ....... 56
- Sequenced timing of depeasantization .......................................................... 60
- Well-charted predictable developmental path or descent into deepening poverty? 61
  - African smallholder export and food production ......................................... 62
  - Alternatives to smallholder production ..................................................... 62
  - Provision for those without an alternative: African ‘rural holding grounds’ .... 63

Conclusion .................................................................................................. 65

Acronyms ................................................................................................. 68

References ............................................................................................... 69

---

Acknowledgments

The Editorial Group would like to thank all those who have contributed to the realization of this project, in particular the Swedish Agency for International Development Cooperation (Sida) and the Nordic Africa Institute (NAI) for financially supporting the working facilities. Carina Acknowledgement: The Nordic Africa Institute (NAI) for its planning and implementation.

A workshop aimed at refocusing research in the context of the World Development Report (WDR) 2008 was held at NAI by the World Bank in collaboration with NAI and participated in significantly by the discussion and analysis of the book. This materialized as a result of the facilitation of the workshop by Lars-Åke Berger, The Nordic Africa Institute, for its planning and implementation.

A number of researchers with specific written contributions included Beyene, Stockholm University; Swedens, Uppsala, Deborah Faby Beata, Oxford University, Peter Gibbon, DIIS, Copenhagen, Kjell Skarstein, The Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Trondheim and Åsa Torke, Deborah Bryceson and Kjell Haven, editing of the book based on all written comments. 