This volume on Social and Democracy in Soi addresses topical socio-demographic and cultural issues in a society that focused on independence. As before, the focus is on Namibia or its neighbours. Their interest as scholars characterised not by rhetoric, but by concrete notions of human rights, instead of being driven by affiliation. Their investments in transition, a society that has explored the limits to liberal democracy and equality.

I wish to thank all those who have contributed to this project and for their input. The taking place first and foremost is the people. Thanks also goes to those who have served as external reviewers, providing valuable feedback.

Klinge-Nygård, who is deputy director during the Nordic Africa Institute's 40th anniversary, was the editor of this book. They processed the final text and contributed to the final version. Special thanks to Lennart V. Boel Näsund and Karin Näslund for their support.
