EMERIT 12 Item 9 Oral Statement by issues.

The environmental human rights defenders are far from protected. Some recognition of their work was recently given. Practical measures of protection are missing. More cases of pollution should be reported with detailed data. Chemical and biological analysis costs should be substituted.

The agricultural genetic resources are threatened not only by the development or the environmental changes, but also by corporate greed. Some states' laws not only lost seed protection, but also prohibit farmers to collect or exchange their own seeds. Seed protection or regulation laws in various states require urgent systematic comparative studies and exposure to the public eyes of the world. This will save not only the indigenous communities, but also the agriculture of the entire world.

Different drinking water qualities and national water regulations should be examined. States should refrain from the drinking water privatization that always hurt the most vulnerable.

We need to have ethical study of the boundaries of the commercialization of the natural resources.

Thank you very much for your attention.
